Connecting the Dots Between Posture and Health Span

Course Description: This session will provide an experiential exploration of how posture profoundly influences the occlusal system, breathing, sleep, performance, and recovery. The talk will highlight the often overlooked connection between dental health and overall body posture. Dr. Gilden will delve into the negative impacts of today's technology-driven lifestyles that promote poor postural habits. The lecture will underscore the importance of recognizing these detrimental patterns and adopting proactive behavioral modifications to enhance postural health. Attendees will learn that by improving their posture and body mechanics, they can enhance their overall health.

Medical Emergencies in Your Dental Office
7 Critical Steps

Statistics show that most emergencies in a dental office occur during or immediately following local anesthesia administration. Syncope is the most frequent medical emergency, accounting for 50% of cases, followed by allergic reactions at 8% and hyperventilation at 7%.

Signs, symptoms and team readiness response are critical. You will be able to take action for medical emergency preparedness knowing your roles, responsibilities and limitations.

Evening Seminar •
Ray Ma, DMD
Periodontal Regeneration – UPDATED

Major advances in periodontal therapy have resulted in paradigm shifts in the periodontal field. Over the last decade, there was realization that the periodontal structures can be regenerated, rather than simply repairing the tissue after periodontal disease has occurred. How do we recognize and screen patients for the appropriate therapies? When should clinicians intervene? This course will review the diagnosis, etiology and treatment options of the bony defects around teeth. Biological principles of periodontal regeneration, clinical application of tissue regeneration, and the regenerative materials will be discussed, including laser therapy.
